Q: Laravel 5 - User defined password hashing algorithm I am new to PHP and have been using Laravel for some time now. So far its a great framework but recently I ran into an issue with password hashing. Generally when you log into any website you authenticate using some kind of hashing algorithm to generate a unique password for your login. So if I am logging into a site like gmail, every time I login I generate a random password using the password_hash() function and store it in the database. In php if I have a function called generateRandomPassword, how do I go about adding password hashing to this function to make it use something other than password_hash()? For instance, I want to add something like this to my function: $password = password_hash($password, PASSWORD_DEFAULT); Any help with this would be great. Thanks! A: One easy way to do this is to simply override the 'password' key on your $user object. This is a quick and dirty way of overriding user password hashing. user.php $user->password = password_hash($password, PASSWORD_DEFAULT); registration.blade.php This method comes with a few problems. First of all, you should probably not be assigning passwords to users. You should always be hashing passwords. This will probably break your users. Secondly, as the previous answer points out, this makes your user's password vulnerable to being logged in by other users in your system. 2011 NAB Women's Championship The 2011 NAB Women's Championship, known for sponsorship reasons as the ANZ Australian Women's Championship 2011, was the 17th season of the NAB Women's National Basketball League (WNBL). I have the same OS version as other people who say it works. It works fine on the K330. I don't know if the reason it doesn't work is that I have malware on my T6 or that it is damaged, but I would like to remove it as I've spent a lot of money to get it. I have the same problems. There is something wrong with my phone. My phone screen became black when my battery is flat, the power light is always on, and no luck to clear the cache, even factory reset. I don't think my phone has any problem but it not work as I expected. I wasted lot of money when I finally decided to get a sony ericson t6. The phone is just not that good in quality. These extra features will slow down your phone and might make your battery last less time. At least, you have a problem with your battery. Answer Hi, use the F10 key to show a guide screen and press the menu button, then press the button to show the settings. Open the power option and set the battery to low level to increase the time for the battery to die. After this, the battery will not be able to show the list. The reason is because the power in the phone is set to low level. You must set it to the maximum. Reason: You need a step-up transformer to use your phone outside of the case. Your hands are far from the phone and it won't be working. You need the phone in order to
