If Paul Ryan says something, and it sounds like an actual opinion, take it with a grain of salt. The speaker of the House has a track record of saying something, and it doesn't sound like a real opinion, but reporters still write it up as if it were. That's why we give Ryan's speeches the Paul Ryan Seal of Approval. First, here's a sampling of recent speeches from the House speaker. Seal of Approval rating: "I do think that we need to see an end to ObamaCare's unpopular Medicare changes," May 3, 2012. Ryan gets one for telling us to end something that was unpopular. For releasing this statement, he gets another. Seal of Approval rating: "The way to prosperity is through good government and by strengthening our community," May 4, 2012. Seal of Approval rating: "Yes, I would. If you had the chance to ask me if you could change one word in ObamaCare, what would it be? It'd be repeal." April 30, 2012. Ryan repeats: "Repeal." Another win for Ryan. Seal of Approval rating: "Since 1988, our debt-to-GDP ratio has been falling at over 4 percent a year. That's faster than the economy has grown in the same period." June 3, 2012. Ryan does okay. He's right that when you look back over the past 30 years, the country has brought down its debt-to-GDP ratio faster than economic growth. Seal of Approval rating: "The federal government should not be subsidizing our businesses," April 30, 2012. Seal of Approval rating: "Social Security is facing a frightening financial crisis." July 13, 2012. Ryan scores another direct hit. Seal of Approval rating: "The wealthiest among us shouldn't face a lower tax rate than those in the middle of the country." April 30, 2012. Ryan does okay. Seal of Approval rating: "I don't think we ought to be funding the president's trip to the border with Mexico" April 19, 2012

And he made Marion look like the whore she really is. I listened to the interview the other day with Sam Harris, author of The End of Faith. He has been on the run for several years from fascists and violent Jihadists for his philosophy, which may not necessarily win him any fans who want to feel superior by bashing someones beliefs. So Sam Harris is a nice Jewish looking guy in his 30s now. So, now he's running around with Muslims in Afghanistan and Pakistan. I was listening to a podcast of his interview with a British radio personality, and Sam Harris suddenly jumped in with an interesting comment during the interview. He said the one thing you don't want when you are surrounded by armed radicals...is to have them question your motives. Don't tell them what you believe in. However, then he brought the argument back around to how stupid or retarded this would be. The person walking around with a loaded weapon, like the Taliban, Pakistani extremists or the Mujahedeen will read your intentions, if not your speech. This is a strange comment for Sam Harris to make. He has spent his life exposing the ways in which these terrorists see the world. First he was exposing the way these radical Muslims misunderstood the Koran. Now he has to open up to the fact that these people are not only stupid, but they are also deeply racist. It's because Muslims are treated like dirt, and they themselves are not treated like anything. The world doesn't revolve around them, and the way they think their religion is special. They are taught to think their Allah is a monster. Their God is not equal to other gods. They are taught to hate all non-Muslims. Sam Harris is no dove. He's been right there in the middle of all the craziness. He's a humanist, not just a Jew. He doesn't back down in the face of intimidation. Now he is saying he supports a peaceful Muslim. For him to say that is a contradiction to him not being aware that these people even know how to be peaceful. I just don't see how he can be in love with humanism when he wouldn't even dare disagree with an African-American for fear of death. So, at the end of his life he has changed his mind. He wants to be a peaceful person? Again, Sam Harris says the comment because it's the politically correct thing to do. The real reason he doesn
