Q: Determine owner/manager for a Windows file I am looking for a way to determine the user that last modified a file on a Windows system. Use case Assume a user is the owner of the computer and tries to write a program in the form of a batch file (cmd.exe, Powershell.exe,...). This user tries to run the program with the required arguments, so Windows User Account Control (UAC) can't be used. The user adds the file as a scheduled task with the parameters %SystemRoot%\System32\cmd.exe /c "DIR C:\Program Files\My Program*.exe /s /b" > C:\Users\Username\AppData\Local\Temp\tasks.txt. Now the user has the desired output in the text file but the wanted users last modified date will be changed. How can I work around this? Requirements UAC can't be used. Requirements are for Windows 2008R2 Server. Sidenote The program is not linked to an account or a domain, so I can't use the NetUserGetLocalGroups method. A: I found the solution. All the necessary information is stored in the command line arguments of a program that can be invoked with Command Line Shell (cmd.exe). The arguments are stored in the registry as a value of the key "CommandLine". The information is contained in the value "CommandLine"\0"CommandLine". The first 0 characters of the value are - so I have to use the following search pattern to determine the file path: "%SystemRoot%\System32\cmd.exe /c %SystemRoot%\System32\cmd.exe -c "DIR %1 /s /b"" > C:\Users\Username\AppData\Local\Temp\tasks.txt
