Gameplay ▲ ▲ ▲ The game starts with the character creation, where the main character's appearance can be customized, including the appearance of the character's body. The player can choose between two "categories" to base the character on, and can freely adjust a variety of parameters such as height, weight, and appearance and express their own character. Next, your character is equipped with weapons, and can select and combine weapons to increase their power. The player can also add and equip spells to create their own magic. The player can take on jobs as a mercenary, a soldier, or other jobs that are offered depending on the region, and can freely engage in combat or evade enemy attacks. ▲ ▲ ▲ While moving in the game, if the player's position is detected, then the player becomes aware that they are being tracked by enemy troops. The tracking status shows the enemies' current position and the player's position, and there are several different kinds of enemy troops which attack the player as they progress through the map. If the player runs or evades the enemy's attack, they can capture and use a job that the enemies dropped. ▲ ▲ ▲ To freely travel between the landscapes, the player uses a speedboat and can travel to up to two adjacent places at once. While traveling on the boat, the player can engage in conversation with others using a conversation wheel. You can also freely interact with NPCs (Non-Playable Characters) and hire them to use their special skills. This is an element that will be described later. The interaction of the player and the NPCs is important to the game. The player can buy or sell items that the NPCs can use. It's possible to buy items for a certain amount of gold in the black market from the NPCs, and you can save items that they drop in the black market to sell them in the Town Map. Using this, you can earn a lot of gold without fighting. To attack and defeat the enemy troops, you can use a combination of firearms, hand-to-hand weapons, and magic. ▲ ▲ ▲ If the player wins the battle, the enemy troops are defeated bff6bb2d33
