NEW HAVEN, Connecticut - In a surprising announcement, the head coach at Yale has decided to step down after 5 years at the helm. There had been speculation about whether Ben and Izzy did indeed have an ending, but this seems to be a quite abrupt end to the coaching. In a press conference held today, Ben Drager will say the following. "It's been a great run. I have been blessed. I have a strong family and I'm proud of what we have been able to do at Yale. The Bulldogs have been nothing short of amazing, we have had a tremendous and exciting season." A person at Yale, not connected to the school, said "I'm shocked, a very close friend, we were speculating that Ben and Izzy were going to be let go, but now this comes out. Are we excited? Well if we are, we should be, any one of us can step in or out of the room and take over. No worries." Coach Drager was hired by Yale in 2010, and immediately weathered a difficult season. He followed that with a solid but somewhat inconsistent 7-4 season, and was still left with a very good head start. The league years have been outstanding, with the team getting closer and closer to a conference championship. Coach Drager has been able to do things well at a very competitive place, but he's been known to show his emotions a bit too much. He would keep the head coaching position for another 3 years, but a combination of the enormous success, which may lead to more success down the line, and his lack of experience at a larger school led him to an early retirement.

"Congratulations Ben, you have made many friends here. I have nothing but good things to say about you and the Bulldogs, and the entire American League." Perforation of esophagus due to gastroduodenal ulcer by a nail. Into a previously unrecorded time of nearly twenty-five years, an 80-year-old man with 6d1f23a050
